ongoing projects

- Identifying Perceived Benefits and Disadvantages of Restoration Adoption in an Urbanizing Watershed. 2013-present. This multidisciplinary research project, in collaboration with researchers at the Environmental Protection Agency's Atlantic Ecology Division, relies on interviews and focus groups with managers and members of the public to study adaptive management in an urban watershed and contribute to an ecosystem services indicator tool.
- Impacts of Climate Change on Commercial Fishing in Rhode Island. 2012-present. This IRB-approved project investigates the relationships between managers, marine scientists, and commercial fishermen in Rhode Island, with particular emphasis on the mechanisms through which commercial fishermen become involved in scientific research and policymaking.

- Watershed: Conserving a Common-Place. 2008-present. This dissertation project, a hybrid of quantitative and qualitative methods based on fieldwork with agricultural landowners, operators, and conservation staff, analyzes situated arguments about conservation, land use, gender, ecology, and agriculture in an eastern Iowa watershed.

completed projects

- Evaluating the Educational Outcomes of a Citizen Science Project. 2009-2010. This collaborative research project determined what participants learned about bees, urban wildlife, and the scientific method through participation in the Chicago Area Pollinator Study.
- Chicago Area Pollinator Study. 2008-2010. This capstone project of the Landscape, Ecological and Anthropogenic Processes Program, in collaboration with the Urban Wildlife Institute of Lincoln Park Zoo, brought together ecologists, evolutionary biologists, rhetoricians, and educators to design and execute a citizen science bee collection study in the Chicago area to determine the diversity and abundance of bee species throughout the city and suburbs.
- Local Knowledge, Global Vision: A Model World Conference on Women's and Girls' Rights. 2006-2009. This conference, based on the United Nations' Fourth World Conference on Women, brought underserved Chicago high school students to the University of Illinois at Chicago for a one-day model world conference as the culmination of 10 weeks of work on contemporary women's rights in their classrooms.
- Immigration Mobilization Project. 2006-2009. This interdisciplinary project at the University of Illinois at Chicago brought together sociologists, anthropologists, political scientists, and educators to study all facets of the 2006 and 2007 immigration marches and rallies in Chicago and throughout the nation. The group is responsible for completing the first large-scale survey of the 2006 Chicago immigration march.

Dear Nathan,

The Cultural Affairs Committee has approved funding for your event, Caroline Gottschalk Druschke "Working for Water..", in the amount of $300.00.

A concise summary of one page or less on the event and attendance must be submitted to the Committee, through me, within 60 days from the conclusion of your event, along with an Adjusting Entry, GL backup and corresponding receipts. Receipts submitted after this deadline cannot be reimbursed; if there are unavoidable extenuating circumstances, you must contact me before the deadline to request alternate arrangements. Please also attach copies of promotional material and publicity, including reviews.

Each member of the Cultural Affairs / Distinguished Lecture Series Committee (currently 12 members) shall be entitled to a total of two tickets per committee member, should yours be a ticketed event and should they wish to attend. Those requests will be made through me, to you.

We very much appreciate your ongoing partnership maintaining UMaine brand standards. Please see the following link for branding information for your event's promotional material: <http://umaine.edu/marketingandcommunications/brandstandards/>.

Please contact me with any questions.

Congratulations!

Re: Funding for Caroline Gottschalk Druschke Lecture

Invited Scholar Caroline Gottschalk Druschke presented a public lecture, "Working for Water: A Place for Rhetoric in Watershed-Based Conservation Practice" on Monday, October 21, 2013 as part of the CMJ Colloquium Series in 424 Dunn Hall. The event was free and open to the public. It was promoted in hard copy via posters and flyers to instructors (to announce in classes) and in electronic copy on the department website and by campus-wide FirstClass conferences and to the colloquium distribution list. The lecture was very successful and drew an audience of approximately 16 faculty and students from across the University. There was a lively discussion afterward. In addition, Professor Druschke met with interested students and researchers who were unable to attend the colloquium: in the morning she met with members of Knowledge to Action teams and with Environmental Communication students in the George Mitchell Center. In the afternoon after the lecture, she met with students and researchers associated with the Climate Change Institute and the Sustainability Solutions Initiative.

I appreciate the support of $300.00 from the Cultural Affairs/Distinguished Lecture Series Committee. I attached documentation (the GL report) for the honorarium that was paid out of the CMJ department funds. The remaining expenses for auto travel and hotel accommodation are paid from the Bailey Professorship fund. Please contact Nancy Smith in our department if you require further information about reimbursing the department account.

Thank you,

Eric E. Peterson, Professor
